I-580 resolution moves on

A proposed resolution by Sen. John Holmdahl (D-Hayward) ordering Cal Trans to work on opening Highway 580 to unrestricted traffic has cleared its first hurdle in the legislature.

The Senate transportation committee approved the measure, SCR 58, 6-0 Tuesday and sent it on to the finance committee. If passed, the resolution would order Cal Trans to renegotiate its out of court setlement with the Sierra Club that resulted in 580's present "diamond lane" configuration.

The resolution also directs the agency to begin a new environmental impact report on the highway as a back up measure if the negotiations fail and matter returns to court.

A floor vote has not been scheduled .

Mori rape bill stalls

A bill by Assemblyman Floyd Mori (D-Pleasanton) that would require a state prison term for husbands convicted of raping their wives failed to get past a legislative committee Monday.

The all-male Assembly Criminal Justice Committee voted to table AB 327 and schedule it for an interim hearing in July or August.

The bill would have made wife rape punishable by up to five years in a state prison. Currently, it is classified as a misdemeanor battery punishable by up to six months in county jail and a $500 fine.

Mori argued that regardless of marital status, women should receive equal treatment under the law. The state prison sentence should be part of the protection, he argued.

Committee Chairman Ken Maddy (R-Fresno), a candidate for governor, suggested such a bill would give women the threat of a rape charge as leverage in family fights.

A bill similar to Mori's has been killed three times previously on the Assembly floor.

DA probe continues

Ex-chief retains legal voice

LIVERMORE — Former Police Chief Ronald Lindgren yesterday announced he has hired an attorney who will speak on his behalf and investigate allegations made against him regarding his sudden resignation Jan. 11.

Livermore attorney Jack Noonan will "investigate and will be making statements on my behalf as necessary," Lindgren said in a prepared statement read to reporters yesterday.

This follows a statement made Tuesday by City Manager Bill Parness that he had received new information in the matter last Friday from within the Livermore Police Department that, if later proven to be true, would indicate that "some illegal practices indeed might have occurred."

Lindgren's full statement reads as follows:

"In light of the latest press release by the city, I believe I can no longer remain silent over the allegations and rumors being circulated. I have retained an attorney who will investigate and will be making statements on my behalf as necessary.

"As of this time, I have not been allowed to have a copy of nor read the private detective's report or any other report nor have I been told of any of the charges being investigated by the district attorney's office.

"When the investigation is completed, I want an opportunity to review the allegations and also be allowed to confront those who have made them. I have been denied this as of this date."

Lindgren resigned effective Feb. 11 following a meeting between Parness and the city council at which a report prepared by private investigator Claude Glenn was apparently discussed. That report, which apparently served as the basis for the resignation, contained no evidence of illegal acts by Lindgren, Parness said at the press conference during which the resignation was announced.

Clayton DaVega, Alameda County assistant district attorney, told The Times yesterday that "four or five" investigators, some full-time and others part-time, were working on the Lindgren matter.

He would not speculate on how long the investigation would take or what areas were being investigated.

Lindgren, 39, had been Livermore's police chief for five years. He is officially on a leave of absence until the resignation takes effect. Acting Police Chief Jack Essex heads the department while a nationwide hunt for a new police chief continues.

Now that rationing is gone

A majority of Bay area water customers plan to stay hooked on rationing without being prodded by East Bay Municipal Utilities District (EBMUD) or the San Francisco Water Department (SFWD).

The two water districts axed mandatory rationing Tuesday, effective Feb. 1. They urged customers to maintain voluntary rationing.

EBMUD serves a population of 1,050,000 people, including San Ramon, which reflects 310,000 accounts, according to EBMUD's Public Information Representative David Vossbrink.

SFWD has "approximately" 156,000 customers within city and county limits, according to that water department's spokesman.

He said he had no figures for scattered outlying areas served by SFWD which includes Sunol, Castlewood and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory (LLL).

During a survey yesterday, customers in both water districts said they were willing to continue conserving since they realized the drought could hit again. They said they also realized they had been wasting water before the drought hit.

If customers decide to allow themselves to use a bit more water, they said lawns, plants, shrubs and trees were slated for top priority.

An occasional longer shower was second on the list. Using dishwashers again came in third; washing the family car, fourth.

A San Francisco woman said she would remain careful with water but not limit herself to two baths a week anymore.

"For my health's sake I need more than that," she thought "I had scurvy."

Burglary suspects search on

PLEASANTON — Two men who attempted to burglarize a Payne Road residence before noon yesterday were the subject of an intensive search by police in the Val Vista area.

Citizens reported suspicious activity on Payne Road about 11:30 a.m., said Lt. Dave Freeman. Police responded to the location and spotted two suspects who fled on foot.

The suspects' vehicle was recovered, Freeman said. Residents reported seeing two men running through fields and backyards in the Val Vista tract.

A helicopter was called in to aid in the search but no suspects were arrested.

Officers fared better Tuesday night when a silent alarm brought them to Aero Appliance at 3440 Stanley Blvd. and two men discovered inside were arrested on suspicion of burglary.

Officers arrived about 11:15 p.m. and spotted a man about to exit a side door. The suspect ran back inside upon seeing police.

The building was surrounded and police dogs were used to search the interior with no results. Officers climbed onto the roof and arrested two suspects.

Police said the suspects apparently cut a hole in the roof, lowered themselves down and stacked up stereo equipment, but were discovered and climbed back up the rope.

Officers Donald Saulsbury and Gary Tollefson borrowed an extension ladder from a nearby business to make the arrests.

Booked on suspicion of burglary were Lloyd B. Dodge, 22, of 7701 Ironwood Drive in Dublin and Robert Anthony Maguire, 27, of 9200 Alcosta Blvd. in San Ramon.

In other police action, a 14-year-old Foothill High School student was robbed of $6 by four men at the school's football field during lunch hour Monday.

Police are searching for four men aged 18 to 19.

Weather

Fair in the Valley through tonight with occasional high cloudiness and patchy morning fog. Increasing cloudiness Friday.

Election decision due

Trustees of the Livermore Valley Unified School District will decide at a special meeting Friday morning whether to go to the voters with a request for a district revenue limit increase for 1978-79.

Rights activist quits

Livermore's Jane Oliver, long active in human rights circles locally, has resigned her seat on the Alameda County Human Relations Commission after serving for only a few months.

She cited personal reasons for the resignation, including a desire to devote more time to family concerns.

Supervisor Valerie Raymond, who said she was sorry to see Oliver leave the position, welcomes applications for the post from interested parties.

Resumes may be addressed to Raymond at her s supervisorial office, 1221 Oak St., Oakland.

Downtown plan complete

Livermore Planning Commission wrapped up its study of amendments to the zoning ordinance for the downtown area this week and will send a package of recommended amendments to the city council by Feb. 7.

The amendments would rezone CG (general commercial) district to CS (commercial service) district in the area generally located north of Stanley Boulevard, westerly of Railroad Avenue, and between Stanley and Murrieta Boulevards to Fenton Street.

The amendments would implement the Central Area Element approved last month by the city council.

Pleasanton restrictions

A reprieve for the horse

PLEASANTON — Council is taking a cautious approach to changing the city's image and passing an ordinance limiting where people can ride horses.

Members decided Tuesday a proposed ordinance banning horses from commercial business districts and "thoroughfares" was too harsh and asked the city attorney to prepare a new ordinance regulating the animals only on Main Street and in shopping centers.

Ridding downtown of horses has been a pet project of Mayor Bob Philcox since he came on council four years ago.

Teens, particularly in spring and summer, occasionally ride their pets downtown or to shopping centers. The horses follow nature's course, leaving their remains whenever and wherever the urge strikes.

In a more serious tone, however, Philcox said he fears the horses will cause an accident in the heavy Main Street traffic and noted that Police Chief Walt McCloud supports passing an ordinance.

The original ordinance prepared for council would have banned the animals from city thoroughfares, but members nixed that after debating the definition of a thoroughfare and questioning how riders could cross town at all without traveling on some "thoroughfare."

The ordinance won't force horse owners to register their animals or pay any ownership fee.

Final day for recipe entries

Today is the deadline for entering the Times annual "Favorite Recipe" contest.

Entries must be postmarked by midnight to be eligible. Mail to The Times Favorite Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 607, Pleasanton 94566 or leave your entries at our Livermore office (1916 Second St.) or our Pleasanton office (126 Spring St.) by 5:30 p.m. today.

All winners and a number of the interesting recipes will be published in the Favorite Recipe section appearing with your Times on February 16.

Youths' ambitious movie

PLEASANTON — Sometime this spring there will be a cataclysmic "encounter" of two unfriendly planets right here in quiet little River City!

More specifically, this encounter of another kind will take place in the vicinity of Harvest Park School and involve the warring celluloid kingdoms of "Pleiades" and "Fectar."

"Tony Galloway" and "Ned Mandez" will match wits with the ultimate mask of evil on "Fectar," the villainous "Lord Truder."

Mike Craig and Brett Kubik, eighth graders at Harvest Park School, have cast themselves in the "good guys" roles in this 16 mm., home written and produced sequel to the fantastically successful "Star Wars."

In fact, Brett and Mike have already written 30 of a planned 72 pages of scene explanations and dialogue for what they intend to be a 60 to 90 minute movie.

They have also constructed props, including "Pleiades" base, the hangar on "Pleiades," XB-4 "the evil robot," and Laser "blaster guns."

The script, alone, is written and typed very professionally and the youngsters' attention to detail is equal to adults many years their senior.

As Brett, a resident of Tanglewood Way explains, "We both made movies before for a history class last March (An 8 mm. enterprise entitled "Knights in Shining Armor"). But this will be on our own. We got the idea to make a sequel after seeing 'Star Wars.' "

Title of the locally written and produced epic is still uncertain as of now.

An idea of the detail can be gleaned from the description of the initial frames.

"Words appear (title and credits) and go in an upward motion (just like 'Star Wars'), camera moves over the top of two planets and gets close to the third planet. Then there is a big explosion on the planet and seconds after little dots appear in the sight of the camera and get bigger until they are just about to hit the camera (The dots are space ships.

And mind you, the youngsters intend on creating the exact "special effects" as outlined.

The youngsters, with the aid of a $40 donation from the Harvest Park Home and School Club and a host of volunteer student-actor production assistants, hope to start filming in March with a "premiere" (probably at a Home and School Club meeting) in June.

"...if not by late May," chimes in Mike.

Brett describes the story line they've worked-up to date:

"Lord Truder is the mask of all evil on Fectar and they've been battling Pleiades. One of their space ships crashes into Pleiades, we go and fix it and put a jamming system into it.

"As 'Tony Galloway' and 'Ned Mandez,' we fly the Star Fighter back to Fectar and get the secret tapes that have a special weapon that weakens the sun each day (Pleiades is heated by solar energy). After sabotaging and getting the tapes, Tony and Ned fly back to Pleiades and plan an attack on Fectar."

Brett and Mike add that the story line calls for Lord Truder to survive the big battle (Editor's Note: Sorry we have to give away part of the socko ending) "so that we can make a sequel....to the sequel."

Asked if there would be the hint of a romantic encounter in their film, ala Mark Hamill and Carrie Fisher as "Princess Leia" in "Star Wars," Mike and Brett noted that teachers at school had already quizzed them about that.

The two hasten to answer that this will be strictly an adventure film with no romantic involvements.

Most of the sequences will be shot at Brett's home — in the garage, other rooms and outside — but they would like to use some agency's "computer room" for a few minutes to take some background shots. They could also use a structure that has an elevator and "a long hallway" for additional scene shooting.

Persons or organizations wishing to aid, via donations or equipment, the two young film impressarios can contact them at their residences.

The "film conpany" to date includes about 10 eighth graders ... none of whom have been asked to address the earnest producer-directors as "B.K." or "M.C."

Working most of the weekend in a muddy hole in Pleasanton field, phone splicing technician George Pipes (left), construction manager Lloyd Cowan and John Long hunted for cable breaks affecting service in Pleasanton and Livermore.

Storms kept phone company up nights

Hitting the Valley hard after a two year drought, storms have kept Pacific Telephone Co. workers on six-day weeks and some have not had a day off in months.

Problems in the telephone cable that would have occurred gradually went unnoticed in two dry winters then resulted in a rsh of outages with the sudden heavy storms.

Where Livermore and Pleasanton normally report about 70 trouble cases a day, wind and rains raised that to 230 calls. The result, the average telephone worker has been busy six days a week, working 12 hours a day since mid-December. And with them have been the clerks and desk workers at the phone company center for the Valley in Livermore.

Storm-related outages, though relatively minor, delayed installations for new customers by three or four days, according to installation and repair manager Dorothy McKinnon.

Making repairs kept cable splicers and central office workers in Livermore and Pleasanton on the job over the weekend. One of the longest shifts was Bill Wingerd's who was called in his Livermore home at 10 p.m. Friday and worked 30 consecutive hours, finding working lines to keep customers in service and helping splicers to find the cable break.

For cable splicers who found the breaks the job of repair was particularly frustrating, according to district manager for construction and engineering Dick Morgan.

The cable faults were in an open field in Pleasanton saturated with water and 5,000-foot cable run was flooded.

"It was impossible to bring in our maintenance vehicles because of the mud so we had to use four-wheel drive pickups to bring in the pumps, generators and blowers. And while we were repairing the cable we had to spend hours and hours pumping water out of the manholes," Morgan said.

"Our people worked 12 to 14 hours at a stretch, some exceeded that, some worked around-the-clock," he added.

The problems were finally corrected about 4 p.m. Sunday.

Telephone workers have tended to look at the long hours matter-of-factly. Pat Brooks, who tested cable at a remote repeater station and thawed out at infrequent intervals by jumping into his truck for a few minutes agreed.

"The worst part of the job was all the coffee that I drank," he said.

Castlewood plant faces challenge

PLEASANTON — Castlewood's sewage plant is again under legal fire, this time from the county's environmental health department which plans to issue an abatement order this week.

The abatement order is a preliminary step towards issuing an injunction against the plant which began overflowing effluent Jan. 16, according to Jerry Winn of the county.

Winn fears the overflow is going down Alameda Creek, into the Niles cone and filtering into Fremont's underground water supply used for drinking.

Castlewood was ordered by the Regional Water Quality Control Board Dec. 23 to take five steps as precautions against an overflow. Three weeks later, after the deadline set by the regional board, the steps had still not been taken and the plant's effluent ponds overflowed.

The regional board is considering taking formal action aqainst Castlewood now. The board could either refer the matter directlv to the Attorney General's office or set a new deadline, giving Castlewood a second chance.

The issue may also go before the county water district today in an executive session, thus Castlewood may face legal fire from three sides.

Winn said his department's action will set a deadline for the plant to stop overflow. A court injunction would follow if the sewage system doesn't comply immediately, he added.

The county, worried about health hazards, is demanding the plant have at least two feet of "freeboard" space around each pond.

That requirement would keep the water level in each of the plant's three effluent ponds at least two feet below the surface of pond dikes.

The plant is designed to a handle between 30,000 and 35,000 gallons of sewage flow each day. But it is now taking in about 45,000 gallons each day, with heavy rains stallinp normal evaporation and adding to pond water levels, according to Ninn.

Thus heavy rains are partially to blame for the overflow, but Winn is quick to add that plant management was supposed to have built up the dikes, allowing for increased flow.

If the county, the water district or the regional board seeks an injunction, Castlewood plant management, comprised of homeowners living there, would be subject to any fines or other penalties set by the court.

Possible leukemia link

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Government officials told Congress Wednesday that eight participants in the Smokey nuclear test of 1957 have been found to have leukemia and that that figure is high enough to establish a link, with one proviso.

If it can be determined that the average age of the Smokey observers was 22 or less, said the head of the Center for Disease Control (CDC), then "I have no problem saying (eight) is sufficient," to establish the link.

Wednesday's hearing of the House subcommittee on Health and the Environment was devoted to an examination of nuclear tests in general and Smokey in particular.

Witnesses four survivors of Smokey, including one — in a wheelchair — who said the experience cost him loss of fertility, hearing and hair, as well as causing dizzy spells, one of which resulted in his wheelchair confinement.

Smokey was conducted by Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. However, in two days of testimony criticism has focused on the behavior of the Army, not LLL's boss, the old Atomic Energy Commission.

The only exception to that was the repeated charge from committee members and a group called Another Mother for Peace, that because the AEC and the Army failed to get coordinated, it is now very difficult to gather records on the survivors.

CDC Director William Loege's assessment of the link between Smokey and leukemia went unchallenged by the Defense Department Wednesday and is not expected to be taken on when the Department of Energy testifies today.

Committee members expressed wonderment that the question of the average age of the Smokey observers has not been determined. "Astounding," one member called it.

Much of Wednesday was consumed by attempts to untangle the bureaucratic problems that have caused delays in that and other quests.

At this point, between the efforts of CDC, the Pentagon, the Veteran's Administration, the Energy Department, private contractors including General Electric, and the media (most usefully an article in Parade Magazine) only 447 of 3,550 soldiers who were at Smokey have been located.

CDC officials say the normal of leukemia cases among 3,550 men who were 22 in 1957 would be two. The judgement makes the finding of eight among only 447 all the more striking, but a CDC official said Wednesday, "We think we have over 90 percent of the deaths (among the 3,550)."

He said survivors in good health were the ones least likely to have identified themselves to the government.

Soldiers were present at Smokey as part of an Army attempt to demonstrate that the nuclear age does not render a land force obsolete. On Tuesday the committee saw an Army public relations film from the late 1950's. The film made it clear the Army's purpose in being at Smokey was to show that — given proper safety precautions — a nuclear blast need not prevent early re-entry into a bombed area.

Russell Jack Dann, the former corporal who testified from his wheelchair, said his unit stood at about a 15 minute truck ride from the blast, then drove into "ground zero" almost immediately.

An energy official said Wednesday that LLL and other AEC employees were "no place near" the shot.

The CDC said, if the average age in 1957 turns out to have been as high as 32 — which the CDC doubts — then the expected number of leukemia cases would be four. In that case, it said, the existence of eight wouldn't necessarily be entirely explained by Smokey, because some of the participants at Smokey also may have had experienced other exposures to radiation.

Sub retires

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy will retire the Nautilus, world's first nuclear-powered submarine, next year at the age of 25, Defense Secretary Harold Brown says.

The end of the Nautilus' career is one of the changes in the fleet planned under the 1979 military budget.

Rec unit nixes 66-acre zoning

PLEASANTON — In a compromise move: park and recreation commissioners last night recommended denial of Thomas McManus' application to change the general plan land use for his 66 acres next to the Youth Sports Park from parkland to medium density residential.

The motion, coming after lengthy debate, stipulated that the recommendation wouldn't hold unless the city buys McManus' property within five years.

Chairman Bud Garrigan voted against the motion, claiming commissioners shouldn't put any strings on a recommendation to city council.

The vote came over a month after planning commissioners also denied the application. However, park and recreation commissioners voted reluctantly.

Commissioners Charles Gielow and Kathleen O'Brien questioned whether Pleasanton would ever be in a position to buy the property, expanding the sports park. They indicated McManus has a right to settle the future of his land now or in the near future.

McManus' attorney, Peter Turner, pressed that point noting that a general plan designation of parkland creates only one possible buyer for his client's property — the city.

"If the city wants to buy it now, we are prepared to sit down and negotiate at a very fair price," he said.

Garrigan quickly pointed out that any talk of buying property should go before the city council.

The issue will next go before city council, where McManus is expected to appeal both the planning commission and the recreation commission action.

Conservation

Ralph Blume of San Ramon said his family would continue conserving water; especially where brushing teeth, and taking showers were concerned. He said he would still keep buckets in the shower to catch water for outside use.

Rich Ivaldi, supervisor of grounds at Sunol Valley Golf Course, said the Club House would continue to "restrict" water. The golf course is watered with nonpotable water from storage lakes, he said. SFWD supplies the club house water.

LLL will also continue to conserve, according to Jeff Garberson, public information officer. LLL is served by SFWD plus a standby emergency supply from Zone 7 for fire protection and other emergencies should the SFWD line fail to function.

Garberson said LLL's water consumption was 204.6 million gallons for 1976; 157.5 million gallons for 1977.by Sue Vogelsanger

Davis speaks at Round Hill

BY RUSS YARROW
Lesher News Bureau

ALAMO — Republican gubenatorial hopeful Ed Davis stopped in Contra Costa County Tuesday pitching for votes, expressing mild support of the Peripheral Canal and evading a position on the Jarvis tax initiative.

The former Los Angeles police chief gave a short speech before a group of Republicans at a luncheon at Roundhill Country Club.

"The Peripheral Canal, with proper safeguards and more statesmanship will be a beneficial project," Davis replied to a query from Supervisor Warren Boggess, Concord, on where he stood on the issue.

"I realize a lot of people here have been anti-canal," he said, "but I think we have to balance the needs of Southern California and the Delta."

Davis said he was unfamiliar with Assemblyman Dan Boatwright's recent proposal to build a dam on the Eel River as an alternative to the canal.

"We are not the water hogs you think we are in Los Angeles," he commented. "Eighty-five percent of the water we get goes for agriculture. You have to feed people."

Davis, who has shown increasing popularity on recent political polls, predicted that he would capture the Republican nomination for governor in June and that his campaign has "shattered the myth of the invincibility of Jerry Brown."

"When I first started this campaign I was portrayed as honest, a good administrator and a tough cop," said Davis, 65. "But I am not that narrow. I am an art collector and have been a professor (of criminal justice) for 18 years. I've done many other things. I have been a good curious citizen."

Asked how he stood on the Jarvis initiative, a referendum on the June ballot calling for slashing property taxes to one percent of assessed valuation, Davis said he was "neither for nor against it."

He said the initiatives concept was good, but that it contained "defects."

A tax rate of 1 percent might pay for basic public services now, said Davis, but the Jarvis initiative calls for an annual tax increase of two percent, while inflation is continuing at six percent.

"There is no way property taxes will pay their way at that rate," he said flatly.

Davis also warned that the proposal would have a devastating effect on education by cutting back funding and placing "100 percent control and financing of the schools in Sacramento."

Davis criticized Brown for "bringing up the state as a midget" under "no-growth policies" and urged the development of nuclear power as a solution to energy problems.

"There's no problem with nuclear waste," he said, "We can store it. Why Richard Nixon bought a house only two miles from a nuclear plant in San Onofre. That to me is a tremendous sign of its safety."

He repeated the familiar conservative criticism of "big government."

"You look at all the boobs that have been put into government. You can't get at them," he said. "I would change the laws and de-commission the commissions."

"Bureaucracy is a fourth power in government that will be our undoing."

Davis also had sharp words for Brown's performance in office, decrying the governor's "elitist attitudes."

"He's a philosopher like Plato or someone sitting up in the Acropolis. Once in a while he comes down to Athens and spends some time with the poor people, but then he goes back up to the Acropolis," he said. "He's ruining California."

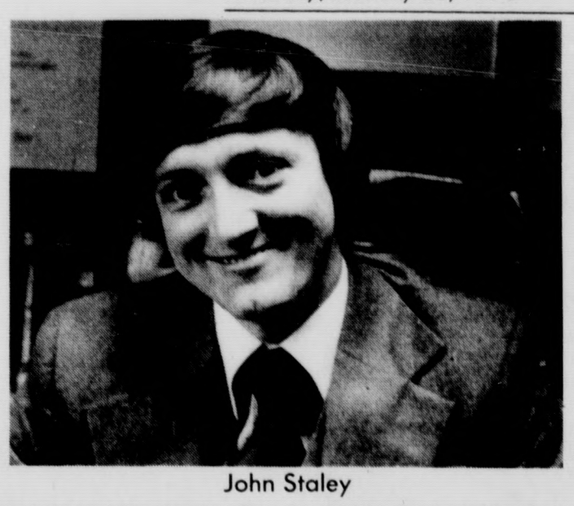
JOHNNY WONDER

Kids come up with the darndest questions sometimes, but Johnny Wonder is one place they can turn to get the straight answer. You can learn something every day too, with Johnny Wonder in The Times.

He balances needs with city amenities



John Staley

LIVERMORE — Councilman John Staley holds a unique position in the upcoming election. He is an appointed incumbent, not an elected one.

Staley came to the council to finish Bob Pritchard's term when Pritchard resigned shortly after his re-election in 1974. But after three years on the council, Staley finds a lot of reasons to look forward and to work for goals in another term as council member.

On the budget: "The first problem we have is the city council has to get a handle on the policy decisions that go into the budget," said the young attorney.

The city manager in the past requested budget statements from his various departments and then sat down with his finance director and went over the projected income. He basically handed the city council the recommended budget, Staley pointed out.

"The council needs, and I want, to get involved in the budget process before the decisions are made and priorities are set," Staley believed. "The problem with that is it takes time; it takes staff time to prepare it, it takes my time to understand it, and it is a very expensive process in terms of time."

The incumbent talked of settng priorities. "We have to have an adequate level of fire and police protection. We don't have to have, in terms of state law, parks. Yet, to me, parks are an extremely important item.

Council candidate

We don't have to have medians, but that's the sort of thing that makes a town worth living in,' he observed.

"We're really talking about two different levels of services: those we simply must have to exist and thos that make existance worthwhile."

On the new council chambers: "I think it's needed now. We have an inadequate place to meet now, there's no question about that. The problem is, it's easy for every council to say let's spend money on everything but ourselves because that's the way to get re-elected and that's the way to satisfy the public. If we had built the city hall at this time without adding the council chambers then I think they probably would never be built," he commented.

On the elected mayor issue: "I think there are drawbacks with the present form of government, but I think the drawbacks are even greater with the elected mayor."

He said the present mayor serves more as a speaker of the house than an executive officer. Livermore has a council - manager form of government and the city manager is the executive. The council is primarily a legislative body and the mayor is a ceremonial position.

"That would not change in fact, elected or otherwise," he said. In the past the mayor has had the support of the majority of the council, but an elected mayor wouldn't have to have council support.

"One of the real problems we could see is a mayor who is totally at odds with the four elected councilmembers," Staley pointed out. "Does that help city government? Does that make us more responsive to the people?"

Besides changing the psychological relationship of the council within its ranks and with the people — "people think they have to go to the mayor with questions and council members happen to be those you call if you know them" — there would be the question of expense.

"One of the big problems you have with an elected mayor without a salary is that you limit the types of people who can hold that position," Staley explained. "I certainly intend to vote for a salary for a mayor if the elected mayor issue passes."

On the pipeline: "I think there is a tremendous amount of misconception and perhaps even knowing deceit being practiced by some of the opponents in which they're going around loudly proclaiming that the people voted the pipeline down and the council ignored their mandate and chose to build it anyway," he said. "The question was not whether we're going to have a project, which at that time was pretty well decided to be a pipeline, but rather what was its size and particularly in Livermore was it going to be four million gallons extra capacity for industrial use, and secondly would we pay for it by bonds."

City looks at lots for homes

LIVERMORE — The city would be interested in annexing four lots of about 10 or 11 acres each for residential development south of Las Positas Road and north of Waverly Way.

But the council Monday night warned the developers that sewage service isn't available immediately.

However, the 44 acres of land are outside of the city's sphere of influence, under the designation by the Alameda County Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO), which creates problems for annexation.

The request for annexation came from a group of developers, Pleasanton Investors, which owns the property. The plans for the lots generally are agreeable with the city's growth plan, council members were told by staff. The city attorney recommended that if they don't annex they should not be given the requested easement to cross a "no access" strip at the end of Waverly Way and no utilities. To do so would undermine the city's "access barrier" policy and create future problems from other developers around the perimeter of the city but outside its sphere of influence.

The land is located in county territory, but would be best developed within the city imits, council and city attorney agreed. The area is designated as "parks, trailways and recreation corridor and protected area" under the city's general plan. But City Attorney Gary Reiners said the large lots would be agreeable to the plan.

Demand for pipeline assurances

LIVERMORE — The city council, with two members absent, dug into the lengthy prospectus on the valley waste water export pipeline this week but came up with only qualified agreement on it.

The council may have to meet again before the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) meets Friday night to make final approvals on the official description.

The council, with Glen Dahlbacka and Dale Turner absent, looked over the galley proofs of the description and grumbled to LAVWMA representative Ernie Bodner about only receiving the proofs earlier Monday afternoon. They felt it was not enough time to thoroughly check the proofs and ask pertinent questions. Several people from the audience also complained about not finding copies of the works in the library for public scrutiny prior to the council meeting. Bodner apologized, but noted they had been working under deadline pressure trying to organize the information from several different agencies.

Throughout a lengthy discussion, the primary concerns of the council seemed to be the question of what happens to the remaining $4.3 million of the originally approved $8.5 million bond issue.

"We do not anticipate any remaining bonds being sold," Bodner repeated to the council, but the doubts remained.

"We want it made clear that no more bonds will be sold beyond those for 'the project,' which is $4.2 million," emphasized Mayor Helen Tirsell. Several responses from the audiences supported that stand, echoing fears that future safeguards on expansion of the pipeline would be missing.

Don Miller hammered in the wording of the prospectus referring to "additions and betterment of the pipeline" as an indication that future expansion could be a possibility, which is not what was intended in the original plan. "There are no safeguards for the public health and safety," he told council members.

City Manager Bill Parness and City Attorny Gary Reiners will meet with the LAVWMA attorney and bond commission this week and try to work out wording difficulties. If there are still doubts about the wording, the special meeting may be called to firm up the council's position for the LAVWMA meeting Friday night.

The lengthy discussion of the wording, and later the possibility of having the engineer come before the council to discuss the pipeline, dragged the meeting to considerable length.

How much government people make

OAKLAND — Proving once again that Alameda County is one of the biggest employers in the East Bay, the county's auditor - controller released figures recently on total gross earnings of county employees.

They totaled $140,774,264 last year, for 12,357 total employees who worked for the county at any one time. (There are approximately 9,500 total job slots.)

In the previous year, Gross earnings totaled $127,905,897. Federal taxes withheld amounted to $22,588,640 last year, up almost $2 million from the previous year.

State taxes withheld amounted to $4,540,215 last year and $3,908,594 in the previous year.

City may solo on sewage

PLEASANTON — The state appears to have changed its past position and is considering allowing the city to build its own sewer plant and hook effluent directly up to the LAVWMA pipeline.

Council authorized city manager Clay Brown Tuesday to formally request a change in the interceptor sewer project being designed to carry effluent directly to the pipeline.

Last week state officials advised Brown to request the change. Previous to that, the state had held the position that the interceptor sewer went along with the city's consolidation in plant facilities with the Dublin, San Ramon Services District (DSRSD).

If the state grants the request, and Pleasanton does build its own plant, the city would have to pay an additional $50,000 to change the interceptor end points and install chlorination facilities so effluent from the Sunol Plant will meet LAVWMA standards.

The city is still negotiating with DSRSD even though months of meetings have failed to produce an agreement.

City officials are concerned that DSRSD will have too much authority over future plant expansion affecting this city's growth.

Moreover, Pleasanton doesn't want to become entangled in a prior lawsuit between DSRSD and a developer. Brown said the city will not consolidate sewage facilities unless either DSRSD or the developer guarantees a limit on the money the city could be forced to pay because of that lawsuit.

Council also unanimously approved the LAVWMA official statement Tuesday, subject to reviewing the addendum regarding the Pleasanton/DSRSD sewer situation.

Third grader wins energy poster test

Jacqueline says of her aruistic ability: "I caught it from my Daddy," whom she says does some art work, when not on his job at a drug company. Jacgueline's award winning poster featured a picture of Snoopy the dog showing how to save energy.

The Pupils' Energy Program contest for elementary grades, and a "Do it Yourself Energy Awards Program" sponsored in Scholastic's secondary magazines, are part of the publishing firm's vear long editorial program on energy which centered on National Energy Week, Jan. 16-20.

Scholastic Magazines, Inc., a publisher of instructional materials and classroom magazines, sponsored contests in each of its elementary magazines in a major effort to involve students in the energy challenge. Over 13,000 students in Grades one to six entered the contest.

Granada students honored with Soroptimists awards

Soroptimist International of Livermore has announced the winners of the Youth Citizenship Award. Two Granada High School seniors, Robin Lee Fisher and Eugene Lara, are the recipients.

Fisher will receive $100 and Lara will receive a $50 award. The Youth Citizenship Award is granted to a senior in Livermore who qualifies on the basis of involvement in the community, school and home.

Fisher has been entered in the Soroptimist District competition and is eligible for a $1000 award. The district winner is then eligible for an additional $1500 on the national level.

Judges this year were Dr. Grace Devnich, Xavier Gutierrez and Barbara Carothers. Maureen Cline was the liaison between the school and Soroptimists. Bernice Carr headed the Youth Citizenship Award committee.

Health unit honors Amador

Alameda County's Mental Health Association recently honored Amador Valley Adult School for "outstanding work in behalf of the mentally ill and toward better mental health."

The achievement award was presented because of the local course entitled "Creative Living," taught by Lamar Busch Thursday morning at the Pleasanton Presbyterian Church.

"This class Provides services to citizens in the community who have emotional problems and/or who have been hospitalized in a psychiatric institution," explained Martin Connolly, director of the Amador Adult Education program and recipient of the certificate. "This class is a place where citizens with few community resources or family ties can feel comfortable."

Persons interested in the course can obtain further information by calling 462-3010 or 462-0022.

Author relates early desire to be writer

PLEASANTON — "So many of my own books have come out of my childhood. I really think everyone has a book inside them," author and guest speaker Marilyn Sachs told an audience of 90 attending the annual Authors' Program Luncheon at Harvest Park School Wednesday.

The traditional lead-off event to the highly-successful Authors Program held at the school, Mrs. Sachs is the first in a series of writers who will meet with students and discuss their works over the next four months.

The New York native described what led to her becoming a writer, intertwining the narrative with references to her publications and asides on her upbringing and children in general.

She startled her audience at one point by opining, "I think a lot of people who are liars grow up to be authors."

She expressed the belief that "A lot of kids who read are basically unhappy ... because they don't want to go outside or join in children's games."

Author of "A December Tale," a compelling book about battered children, Mrs. Sachs said she thought "one wrote primarily to entertain."

"I always knew I would be a writer, although I did think of other things." She mentioned that one of those "other things" was nursing.

She related a story of receiving advice on how to test her aptitude for nursing. "I was told to go out in the street and find a dead tramp who is all cut to pieces and bind all his wounds. Then you can say you're a nurse and your mother will be proud of you.

"I turned that thought into my teacher as part of a composition once and she later gave it back with just one comment written on it — Be sure to start all your sentences with a capital letter."

Some men could use a little consciousness raising too

His local activities — which are many — run the gamut from heading the South County Suicide Prevention Center to directing a rather unusual weekly rap group in Livermore.

He hears people talking, in all kinds of situations — and lends an ear.

The group, which is organized through the local Anthropos Foundation, is strictly for men. And Orlin says he always gets "a mixed reaction" when people hear about the sessions. "They think men don't need their consciousness raised," he says.

That, Orlin says, is simply not the case.

In his year and a half of leading the group, Orlin contends that men — just as much as women — need "some place to really be open."

And those kinds of places, he adds, are not all that available to men. A lot of men don't have a really close friend to share things with," he says. "They grew up at a distance." These men, he adds, are sometimes restricted by societal taboos against really expressing their feelings. "The old culture heroes didn't break down and cry, or have insecurities," Orlin says. Consequently, many men feel they can't let loose with their feelings, Orlin maintains.

Orlin, a Fremont resident, has been working with Anthropos for more than two years now. And he's had a variety of experiences in the couseling field — beginning back in Georgia when he started a crisis center outside of Atlanta.

A licensed marriage, family and child counselor, Orlin moved to the West Coast and took up counseling, (which he still does privately), teaching, work with Anthropos, and the Suicide Prevention directorship. Lately, he's been training the Oakland Police Department in suicide prevention as part of a special program.

In the men's group, which he initiated, the emphasis is on "encouraging each person to take the direction that feels right" in their work or living, Orlin adds.

The group has about 12 participants at the moment, but Orlin says in any one week about five or six usually show up. Then, they "talk about where people are at. I don't provide a program, but I will use my counseling skills on occasion" to keep people on track, he adds. "They trust me. I'm there if they get in too deep."

Orlin says his group members are generally "shy at first" in the sessions, but eventually they learn to loosen up and say what's on their minds. "My fantasy is that men have a harder time sharing their feelings. Men are fairly successful at keeping those feelings under cover."

They range from how to handle a career or life direction to how to "make some changes" in the way a person is living, Orlin says.

Many men are under tension and high stress in work at home, and those are the underlying causes of heart attacks and health problems, Orlin contends. "The problems that women are working against are more obvious. Men are always playing heroes, and they may be hurting just as much."

Some of the participants "want to cope with the changes that the females in their lives are going through." And others are learning "to become aware of the changing roles of women" in a way that they can become "less defensive" and more understanding, Orlin adds. Sessions meet Mondays at 7 p.m. in the Anthropos office, 1814 Catalina Ct., Livermore. Cost, says Orlin, is $15 monthly for four two-hour sessions.

Whatever the topic, men in the group are "not combative or attacking" with each other, as people sometimes fear in "encounter" groups. Though outsiders sometimes "don't know how to relate" to the thought of men expressing their inner feelings, Orlin says the concept has been a success.

"It's a departure from the norm," he says. "But there is a real value in saying the things that are on your mind."

Counselor to speak

Lynn Bieber, a family counselor at Anthropos in Livermore, will speak to parents of Portola School children Thursday, Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the motor development room.

The school is located at 2451 Portola Ave., Livermore.

Topics include "How to Build Your Child's Self-Esteem" and "Some Alternative Methods of Discipline." For more information, call Madge Takemori at 447-3306.

A shot in the arm for nurses

Local school nurses are kind of happy to see that Wilson Riles, California state school superintentant, has designated this week as School Nurse Week in California.

They're happy to get the chance to let everyone know what school nurses are up to these days.

Although they do apply bandages and tend bloody noses now and again, their major function is with students in special education, Helen Gamage has been a school nurse for 20 years, the last 14 in Livermore and she said the role of the school nurse has changed considerably over the years.

"The job I did in Sunnyvale in 1957 can hardly be recognized with what I am doing now," said Gamage. School nurses used to spend their days "on routine first aid and health education in the classroom."

Now, she said, nearly 60 percent of her time is devoted to special education, working with families with children who are handicapped or have learning disabilities.

The other part of her job, she explained, is to administer vision and hearing tests to students.

Gamage, like most school nurses, divides her time among a number of elementary schools in the district. She described herself as a "K through six" (kindergarten through sixth grade) specialist. Most nurses in the Livermore district have duties at both elementary and high schools.

"The public has long recognized that school nurses in the state provide significant general health services and expertise in emergency situation for children in public schools." Riles said.

Gamage would likely be one of the first to agree that school nurses today do more than stick a bandage on a playground scrape.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My girlfriend is always trying to make me jealous and it isn't hard. I think she wants to get me angry and fighting just so we can make up afterwards. This makes me so unhapy and I go through torment. The problem is that I hate myself when I'm jealous. It brings back memories of my childhood. I always felt that my three sisters were more important to my parents than I was. They probably felt the same thing, but most of the time I was angry with them and miserable. This feeling seems to be wrecking my relationship with this woman. What can I do? B.I.

DEAR B.I.: I think you have to be as honest with your girlfriend as you're being with me and tell her exactly how you feel and what you think she's doing. Unfortunately, some people feel that jealousy is an indication of love. It's not. Jealousy is a very destructive emotion that has nothing to do with love. It is a dissatisfaction with self that springs from insecurity. This woman is playing a very destructive game with you. If she can't or won't change, then you might save yourself a lot of pain by breaking off this relationship now.

Any person who feels that the only way to make a relationship exciting is to stir up emotions of jealousy or anger is immature and knows very little about the real nature of love. No one is immune to jealousy.

The technique of deliberately making someone jealous can break up families. It never increases love, but always erodes and diminished any feeling that may exist.

Encourage your girlfriend to try to analyze why she behaves as she does. She too may be acting out a pattern that began early in childhood. I suspect she suffers from feelings of inadequacy and insecurity also but the way she's behaving is definitely counterproductive.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My 17-year-old is broken hearted because she wasn't elected beauty queen for her annual high school festival. She's withdrawn now and her whole personality has undergone a change. She's a very beautiful girl but now she thinks she's unattractive and this makes her depressed. She feels she's worthless and that no one likes her. My husband and I have tried kidding her to get her to laugh off this obsession, but she leaves the room whenever it's mentioned. Should I be worried? P.L.

DEAR P.L.: Yes, I believe for your daughter's future happiness and health, it's essential that she begin to see the value of inner beauty and that she realizes any young woman whose self-esteem rests only on beauty is almost destined to spend most of her life in a state of misery. The tragedy of Marilyn Monroe provided a classic example but there are many others.

I think it's important for your daughter to concentrate on developing more enduring qualities: character, intelligence, wit, warmth and compassion. Because our society places such emphasis on physical attractiveness, many persons sufer trauma and lose self-esteem. Obsession with appearance can lead to suicide, divorce and alcoholism.

Encourage your daughter to pursue and develop talents that are unrelated to physical appearance. If she could do this, losing the beauty queen contest might be one of the most positive events in her life. Right now, she needs a great deal of support fom her family and friends. If she continues to be depressed, I'd suggest you get professional help for her.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am presently involved with a man who has diabetes. He became a diabetic at 21. Is impotence inevitable? Can the diabetes account for mood swings? Is alcohol permitted and if so, what kind and how much? What is the chance of having diabetic children?

DEAR READER — You didn't say how old your boyfriend is now. I presume he is relatively young.

The effects of diabetes have a lot to do with how severe it is. We think there may be more than one cause, or at least more than one factor in causing diabetes.

That means you can't always be sure about the inherited characteristic. Let's say your friend had unrecognized mumps and his pancreas was involved. The end result could be diabetes from a mumps virus infection. Then there is some evidence that if you have a trait for diabetes and have another disease it may precipitate the diabetes. And you may be carrying a diabetic gene yourself that is weak and will not cause you to have diabetes, but it could contribute to the chances of any offspring having diabetes. Genetic counseling is the best way to resolve these thorny problems.

The complications of diabetes, including impotence, eye problems and even changes in the nerves to the feet, may be affected by how well the blood glucose level is controlled. Unfortunately, standard insulin therapy does not provide the smooth control that the normal insulin production by your own body does. However, there are new developments in the wings that may change that. For the moment, careful management of life style, including diet and exercise plus medication if needed is the best bet to forestall complications.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was tired and putting on weight and was puffy. The doc ran some tests on me and found an underactive thyroid. I was always cold.

Now I am taking thyroid and I am always burning up. I lost 10 pounds and the puffiness is gone and I feel good, except for being so hot. Please answer soon, this is getting me down. I'm 55.

DEAR READER — Sounds like you are on the right track. If a person is really low on thyroid, fluid retention, weight gain and feeling cold are part of the picture. If a person's thyroid function is normal, taking thyroid hormones in normal amounts will not induce the weight loss you have experienced.

Q. "WHY DO TIGERS HAVE STRIPES?"
DENA CREHAN
FERRIDAY, LA
A. THE TIGER'S STRIPES PROVIDE A NATURAL CAMOUFLAGE AGAINST THE PATTERNS OF GRASS OR BRUSH IN WHICH IT STALKS ITS PREY.

the CIRCUS of P.T. BIMBO

The tiger is the biggest of the big cats. All tigers have stripes.

The tiger's coat is usually a bright golden color marked with black stripes on the head, body, and tail. While the tiger's stripes make it a standout in a zoo or circus, they are a perfect camoflage in the grass and woodlands of the tiger's natural home.

The stripes break up the outline of the tiger's body and blend with the patterns of light and shade in the surrounding grasses, making the tiger almost invisible when stalking its prey. The victim is usually unaware of the tiger's presence until the tiger is ready to pounce.

A tiger measures 10 feet or more in length. A large male may weigh over 500 pounds.

The tiger is as strong and fierce as it is big. In a fight between a tiger and a lion, the tiger usually wins.

Tigers are found wild only in the jungles and forests of Asia.

Unique or unusual types of business ventures will capture your fancy this coming year. It could be something new that you will create the market for.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.19) Verbal agreements are not likely to count for much today in business. If you want it to stick, you'd better get it in writing.

PISCES (Feb.20-March 20) It s safer not to rely on others who say they'll get something for you or open doors today. Use your own contacts or ability.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Coworkers could be more of a hindrance than a help today. Be very careful that you don't fall heir to their mistakes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A person who is introduced to you as a friend of a friend of yours may be traveling under false colors. Check her out before you get too involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is no day to resurrect an old domestic problem. You'll have everyone at home divided and nothing can be settled anyway.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Match your language to the gravity of the situation today. If you use oral overkill, you'll accomplish only your own downfall.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22) If you're buying merchandise at a strange place, check the bill carefully before you pay. Someone may be trying to chisel a few cents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22) Look out for a sharpie today who will tell you how to reap some windfall profits. His operation isn't the kind you'd want to be involved in.

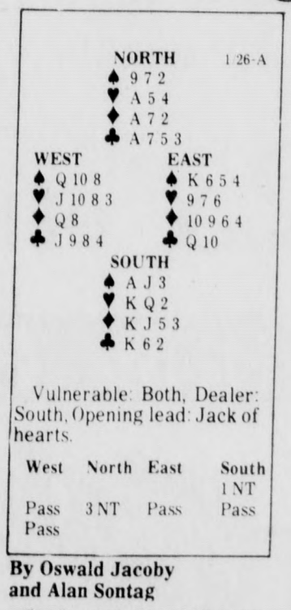
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct.23) If you're going to speak of someone who's not there, speak well of him. If you derogate a person who can't answer, it may boomerang.

SCORPIO (Oct.24-Nov.22) Read the instructions today before you try to assemble something you've bought. Plunging in blindly could end in chaos.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec.21) Don't build your hopes today on circumstances beyond your control, or not in accord with your ideals. Take the safe and moral route.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan. 19) You could possibly repeat a pattern today that has led to mistakes in the past. The leopard doesn't change its spots — the end result will be the same.

win at bridge



Vulnerable: Both, Dealer: South, Opening lead: Jack of hearts.

West	North	East	South
			1 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

South counts to eight easy winners. There are several ways to get a ninth trick, but the best line must be to start on diamonds.

The ordinary player will lead a diamond to the ace and a second diamond back to his jack. West will win with the queen and continue hearts. Eventually, South will wind up with his eight sure tricks and a chance to continue the rubber.

The expert will go after diamonds also, but he will try a different approach. He will cash the king and ace of diamonds. The queen will drop and he will have his ninth trick.

This line would cost him an overtrick if diamonds broke 3-3 and East held the queen. It would give him the same nine tricks as the finesse would have if East held four to the queen or three small, but it gave him that all important trick when West turned up with the doubleton queen.

All that's left to conquer for ABC's, er, NBC's whiz

LOS ANGELES (AP) — News of the future, 1981: Fred Silverman, the programming genius who led CBS, then ABC, then NBC to dominance in the rating, just accepted a job as president of PBS.

"Heck, there's only one network left to conquer now," he said in a statement issued by jubilant executives of the Public Broadcasting Service. He immediately plunged into program meetings.

Sources say he already has scheduled three new series for public television — "Downstairs, Downstairs," "Easthampton Beach Bums" and a drama about ancient Rome called "I, Laverne."

Silverman, who joined PBS moments after his $500,000-a-year contract as NBC's president expired, said he was "excited and challenged by this new opportunity, even though it doesn't pay much."

PBS declined to make public his new salary. But sources said part of it will come from the nation's 212 public television stations next month in what is to be called "Freddie's Pledge Week."

Industry observers were puzzled by Silverman's move. There were no rumors he was unhappy at NBC. His relations with top management there were described as "frank and candid."

As NBC's president, not only did he make big dough, he also had lavish stock options, a chauffered limousine, priority use of the company jet and three company-supplied television sets.

But one high-level network executive, noting Silverman had made successes out of all three major networks, best summed up the industry's attitude this way: "He really wants to get even now."

Reaction by the public television community to Silverman's hiring was mixed.

"I don't think we'll have to stop talking about the important issues," chuckled a spokesman for "Washington Week in Review."

"It could mean the end of the dull documentary as we know it," said a worried executive at New York public TV station WNET.

"Hard to tell," said a source at Boston's WGBH. "For example, can we still buy stuff from the BBC, old chap?"

"It's like a shot in the arm," said a happy official at KCET in Los Angeles. "We've just hired Kate Jackson to host 'Hollywood Television Theater.'"

"I can't talk now, somebody from People magazine is here," muttered Dick Cavett, the PBS talk show star.

Whatever the reaction, everyone agreed Silverman now has an almost impossible task — to raise public TV, which now barely disturbs a Nielsen meter, to No. 1 in the ratings.

Said one expert: "You've got to realize that only a handful of people sleep through 'Masterpiece Theater' each week. But literally millions do that with 'Happy Days.'

"He's got to turn that ratio around and I don't envy him."

(Those who deny this is the news of the future, 1981, probably are in the pay of NBC, which Silverman definitely will join next June.)

This Week on TV

CHARLIE BROWN is talked into a bike race over an obstacle course in "You're a Good Sport, Charlie Brown," an animated Peanuts special to be broadcast at 8 p.m. Monday on Channels 5 and 10. The show originally was broadcast Oct. 28, 1975.

THE SECOND of six BBC dramatizations of passage into contemporary adulthood by a group of 1950s British University students will be aired at 9 p.m. Monday on Channel 9. "The Glittering Prizes," written by Oscar-winning screenwriter Fredric Raphael focuses on the character of Adam Morris, a self-proclaimed Cambridge scholar, world-weary beyond his years. The series, dubbed as "The Graduate—British style," follows Morris from his initial struggles to a successful career.

A HALF-HOUR animated special adapted from Rudyard Kipling's classic "The Jungle Book," is scheduled at 8:30 p.m. Monday on Channels 5 and 10. "Rikki-Tikki-Tavi," based on the story of a mongoose saved from drowning by a boy and his parents, will be narrated by Orson Wells.

Gunter will discuss how his facility operates for the safety of air and ground traffic in the western region of the country. The weekly Lions luncheon will be at the Emperor's Garden Restaurant, 2180 Third St.

Ski series planned

"Ski With Us," Series II, is being offered by the Dublin San Ramon Services District, Livermore Area Recreation and Parks District, Pleasanton Department of Recreation and Human Resources.

Registrations are being accepted at all three recreation departments. Call 828-7711, 447-7300 or 846-3202 for more information.

These ski trips are open to those over 18 years of age. They include five consecutive Wednesday trips to Squaw Valley, Alpine, Heavenly Valley and Kirkwood (depending on where the best skiing is each day).

Ski days are Feb. 15, 22; March 1, 8, 15.

Five all-day ski-lift tickets, five round-trip bus trips, coffee and pastry on ski-bound bus and beverage and cheese on the home-bound bus are included in the total fee of $135.

A $35 deposit is due by Feb. 1. The balance is due one week prior to the first day.

The ski bus departs from Livermore at 5:15 a.m.; from Pleasanton, at 5:30 a.m. Arrival time in the valley should be approximately 8:30 p.m.

Squaw Valley trip off

PLEASANTON — The recreation department is cancelling two ski trips due to low registration.

A three-day trip to Heavenly Valley planned for mid-February and a one-day trip to Squaw Valley scheduled for Jan. 28 have both been cancelled.

Trips are still on schedule to Boreal Ridge Feb. 25 and to Alpine March 11.

The department also announces a meeting of the Valley Venturers Feb. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial building, 301 Main Street. Members are expected to pay yearly dues then.

Pageant open to girls

PLEASANTON — The recreation department is sponsoring a Cinderella Girl Pageant open to females between the ages of three and 17.

The overall winners in each category will receive a crown, trophy and flowers, plus their entry fee paid to the state-wide Cinderella Girl pageant. The local pageant will be held Monday, Feb. 13.

For more information contact Ann Carroll at 846-3202, ext. 215.

Benefit for youth

PLEASANTON — Challenge, the United Presbyterian Church Youth group, is sponsoring a Pancake Breakfast this Sunday from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m. in the church's social hall at 100 Neal Place.

For $2.50 per adult, $1.50 for children, or $10 per family, you can eat all the pancakes, ham and epgs you want, complete with juice and coffee. Tickets can be purchased at the door or in the church office.

Proceeds will go towards building the new presbyterian church planned on Mirador Drive.

Tykus, a progressive rock band from Livermore will host a Jan. 28 concert at 8:30 p.m. in Forester's Hall, Livermore. Fusion, also a Livermore band, will co-host the event. Tykus have performed original material in several Bay Area clubs, including those in San Francisco and Berkeley. Tickets for the concert are $2, and may be purchased at the door or from members of the two bands. The hall is located at Second and S. J Streets.

Council salaries up $50

PLEASANTON — Council members have voted themselves an extra $50 a month, effective in March after the new council is seated.

Each of the five elected officials have been paid $100 a month since 1972 to compensate for the cost of serving the city. But Mayor Bob Philcox, who initiated the pay raise and is leaving the council in March, claimed "it often costs more to sit on council than you're making."

Council passed the pay raise ordinance Tuesday by a 4-1 vote.

Council member Ken Mercer voted against the raise, saying, "I don't see the point of raising salaries by $50. It's not going to cover costs anyway, so why even raise it."

Philcox agreed with Mercer than council members shouldn't make a profit, but said it also shouldn't cost an individual to serve the city, asserting the cost "often goes over $100 a month."

The raise will affect members Bill Herlihy, Frank Brandes and Mercer, as neither Philcox nor Joyce LeClaire is seeking re-election.

Council salaries here are governed by the state government code, which allows members to be paid "no more than $150 per month as salary" unless voters approve a greater increase.

In a separate action Tuesday, council formally adopted an ordinance regulating the display of magazines and books with explicit sexually depictions on the covers.

LeClaire, who was absent when the ordinance was introduced two weeks ago, voted against the ordinance, a calling it a violation of First Amendment rights. The ordinance passed 4-1.

The subject of each council member's overlapping interests as an elected official and as a private citizen was debated after council denied Brandes' appeal of a Board of ad Adjustment decision granting attorney William Hirst a zoning variance to expand his offices on Bernal Avenue.

Brandes appealed the earlier decision, saying it constituted "granting a special privilege." He appealed as a private citizen, but wasn't asked by staff to pay the appeal fee, which can run as high as $25.

Mercer questioned if a council member should be allowed to appeal as a private citizen without paying the cost. After some debate, council agreed that an elected official has greater responsibility than a private citizen, thus should be allowed to appeal decisions without cost.

In a unanimous vote, council set formal policy allowing members to appeal without permission from the entire council and to do so without charge.

Pleasanton commissions

No automatic repeats

PLEASANTON — Commissioners will have to re-apply for second terms, competing with all other citizens interested in the positions, council has decided.

Council set the new policy Tuesday by a 3-2 vote, with Mayor Bob Philcox and member Bill Herlihy voting against the decision.

Unanimously, however, council voted to extend the terms of three commissioners due to expire until May 5, giving whoever fills the two council seats open March 7 a chance to pick the replacements.

Member Joyce LeClaire swung the policy decision, which ended in a split vote two weeks ago when she was absent from a council session.

Susan Scott of the League of Woman Voters urged council Tuesday to set the policy, saying that "all appointments should be open."

Philcox argued against the policy, claiming it would be unnecessarily embarrassing to ask a commissioner to re-apply after doing a good job and forcing each commissioner to compete in public hearings.

Herlihy called it "grossly unfair to an individual to lead him through the interview process" if council members already know they want to re-appoint the current commissioner.

LeClaire and Frank Brandes, however, insisted the policy wouldn't be embarrassing once it was accepted and no longer a new procedure.

The issue came up two years ago when LeClaire asked to open interviews for planning commissioner, even though the two commissioners wanted a second term.

Council extended the terms of park and recreation commissioners Chuck Gielow and Kathleen O'Brien, as well as the term of housing authority commissioner John Hansen until May 5. Both Hansen and Gielow have indicated they won't seek another term.

A's or no A's, the San Francisco Giants need to get into shape, so a few of the locally-based players are working out in the morning at Candlestick Park.

Only the names have changed: Warriors lose

DETROIT — There's really no need for you to read this article.

Sure, the Golden State Warriors lost last night. But the pattern was the same. Dig up yesterday's paper or the day before that — the basic facts are the same just fill in the blanks.

Substitute "Detroit" for "New York" and fill in a score of 99-95. The defeat came on the road — where Golden State has a 4-20 record this season — and it came in a game where neither team scored 100 points — in which the Warriors have a 2-13 record this season.

The Warriors' can't be pitied. They had a 22-point lead midway through the third quarter, only to fizzle and fall.

And, even at that, they entered the last five minutes no worse than even.

Bob Lanier finally took away the Warrior lead with 5:14 to play, but Phil Smith countered with back-to-back jumpers that gave the Warriors a new, 93-90, lead — and Detroit missed its next shot.

But, M.L. Carr swiped the ball from Rick Barry and sailed in for a slam dunk and Eric Money follwed with a jumper that put Detroit ahead, 94-93.

"I try to jump in and out of the passing lanes, mae the guard think," said Carr later. "If he hesitates, it gives me enough time to get in and take the ball."

He didn't steal a pass from Barry, but the same "hesitation" principle applied.

"Rick was looking for the pass, not a shot. He had the ball held over his head and I was able to slap it away," Carr explained.

The Warriors outshot Detroit 46 percent to 42, but in rebounds, turnovers, and, most importantly, points it was advantage Pistons. That is how a team outscores another 51-26 over the final 20 minutes of a game.

Lanier led the Pistons in scoring with 32 points and corraled 11 rebounds. Carr came off the bench for 24 points and nine rebounds while Money scored 21 and Leon Douglas grabbed nine rebounds.xg Robert Parish, starting at center and playing a career-high 42 minutes, hit six of ten shots to end with 15 points and snatched 19 rebounds.

Barry hit eight of 13 shots for 19 points and had five assists, but was held to less shots than he'd like to take. Said Carr, "You don't stop a Rick Barry, but I'm not gonna take anything away from myself, either. I think I played Rick as well as he can be played."

Biz as UNusual for A's

OAKLAND — It's business as usual again for the Oakland A's and San Francisco Giants now that the A's fate has been decided for this year at least.

"We've kept real busy," says Carl Finley, the A's Director of Public Relations.

"We've had to do a lot of things that would affect the team this year whether it was based in Denver or Oakland."

A cousin of the owner, Finley knew no more about the A's future prior to Monday's final decision than anyone else. "About all we knew was what you knew, what you read in the papers."

For the A's office staff, the usual off-season business of preparing contracts to be sent out by Dec. 20 and planning for spring training continued unabated. "We have to arrange for hotels and transportation for spring training in Mesa and also for the season," said Finley. "Then there are matters like uniforms and new equipment."

With the details for spring training out of the way, the A's staff is now working on its press guide, yearbook and program material.

In the next two weeks, plans for the upcoming season's promotions will be laid out, an operation that supposedly will be aided by the Coliseum Inc., City of Oakland and Alameda County.

Meanwhile, the Giants, in addition to sending out contracts and preparing for spring training, have been plotting their promotions for the upcoming year.

"We've been working on our own promotions and were ready to adjust if Oakland did leave," said Stu Smith, the Giants' PR Director, "but basically, we were running our own business."

And that business is clear to Giants' owner Bob Lurie. "I've always maintained that a winning team would solve a lot of our problems," he says.

Vida Blue: it could be wo

NEW YORK — If Vida Blue is forced to remain with the Oakland A's, an unhappy pitcher is bound to become unhappier.

The A's, who attempted to trade Blue to the Cincinnati Reds for $1.75 million and minor league first baseman Dave Revering, are acting as if baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will approve the trade in a ruling he promises to make within several days.

If Kuhn keeps Blue from becoming a Red — an action most baseball people are predicting — then some of the statements after Tuesday's hearing may prove difficult for the A's and Blue to live with.

"We got the best of the transaction," said Neil Papiano, the Los Angeles-based lawyer for Oakland owner Charles O. Finley. "A year from now I don't think we'd trade Blue for Revering straight up."

Now who's kidding whom? Blue, a former Cy Young Award winner and one of the hardest throwers in the game, is a proven quality pitcher. Revering is merely a minor league power hitter yet to prove his major league potential.

Last season, a disgruntled Blue was 14-19 with a 3.83 ERA for the A's, the worst club in the American League West.

"If he wins 20 games for Cincinnati, it would be something he hasn't done in some time," said Papiano of the 1971 Cy Young winner, who was 24-8 in his rookie season (1971), 20-9 in 1973 and 22-11 in 1975. "Revering is a power hitter, the best in the minor leagues. He's younger than Blue (24-28). He'll fit into Oakland's rebuilding plans."

The suspicion is that Revering was just a throw-in, that Finley, who has been talking bankruptcy, needed the $1.75 million. But Papiano insisted, "Revering was not a side issue. The testimony tod trying to get Reve some others, incl kees."

Finley, Marvin the players associ dent Bob Howsan hearing that the I within the major upheld.

In canceling F Blue, Joe Rudi a best interests of b ting such transa opened to buying fluent clubs."

When Finley sued Kuhn for $3.5 million, a federal judge in Chicago upheld Kuhn's authority, calling his powers "near dictatorial."

Roth is bowler of year

CHICAGO — Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., has been named 1977 Bowler of the Year by the Bowling Writers' Association of America.

Roth, 26, finished far ahead in the balloting released today by 168 member of the BWAA, according to Jim Fitzgerald, secretary-treasurer of the group.

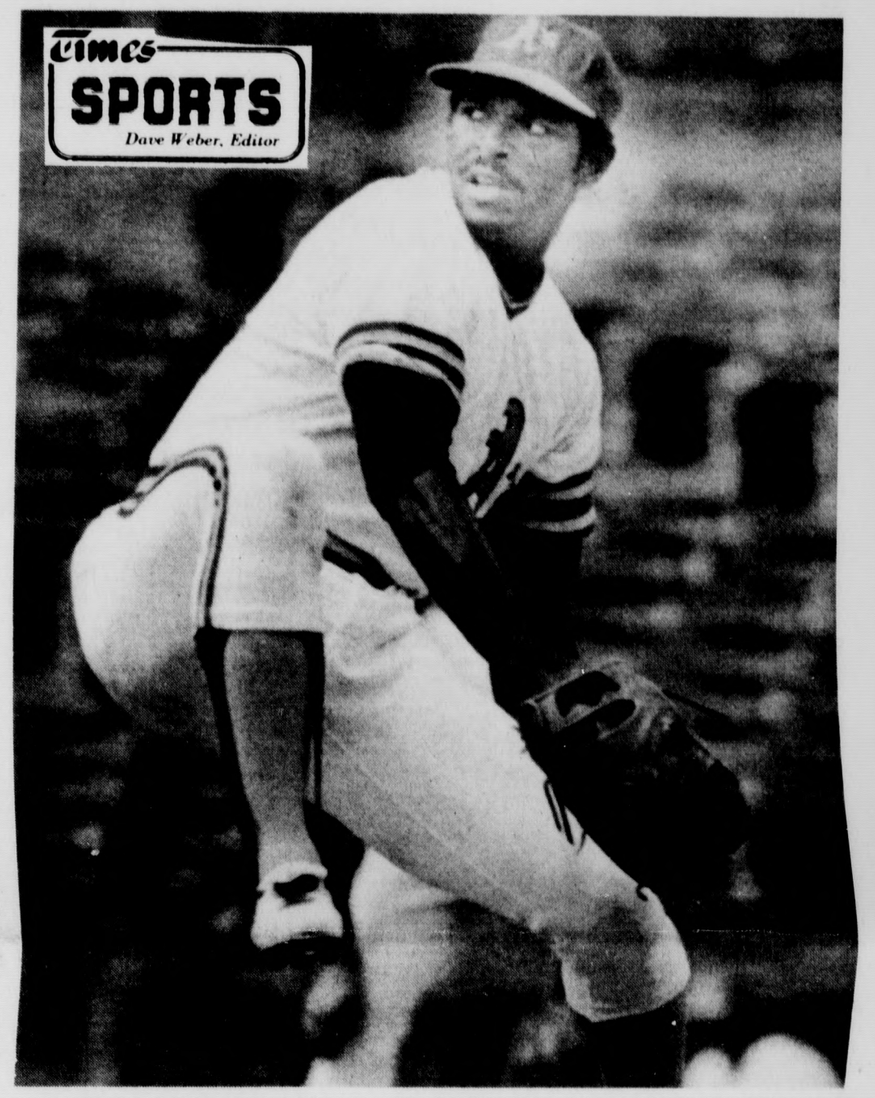
Roth succeeds Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., a southpaw who won the honor the previous three years but finished third in the voting this time.

Roth had 798 points on a 5-4-3-2-1 basis and was named on 167 of the 168 ballots. Roth received 143 first-place votes as he won four tournaments and was the leading money winner on the pro tour with $105,583 in official prize money.

Roth became only the second bowler in history to top $100,000 in a single season. Anthony accomplished the feat in 1975 and 1976.

Tony Hudson of Akron, Ohio, also won four tournaments in 1977 and was second in the voting. Hudson finished with 567 points and received 12 firstplace votes.

Anthony was third with 504 points and Marshall Holman, Medford, Ore., finished fourth with 271 points followed by Mike Berlin of Muscatine, Iowa, with 172 points to round out the top five.



Does Vida stay in Oakland with the A's or move to Cincy?

GGF opens

Danville man's nag is a Natural Joe

ALBANY — Golden Gate Fields opens its longest season today, a day that may featureacontinuation of Bay Area racing's biggest Cinderella story.

A year ago last September, attorney Richard Sanders, of Danville, and trainer Bobby Martin were at the NCTA sale at Golden Gate and liked the looks of a diminutive colt. Because of the colt's small stature, there wasn't much interest in him, and Sanders' bid of $3900 won out.

Though Natural Joe will never match Seattle Slew, the $17,500 yearling purchase that won the Triple Crown, his success story is somewhat similar. Last year, he won four stakes as a two-year-old and placed second in a fifth. Today he makes his three-year-old debut in the featured Golden Bear Stakes.

Sanders made two other purchases at the sale, a filly named Shirley's Sun who has also become a stakes winner, and his most expensive purchase, a $5200 colt named Vintage Lad, who, to show the ironies of horse racing, has yet to win and will be entered soon in a $6500 maiden claimer.

Natural Joe, still on the smallish side, will pit his early speed against the likes of Bascom, the Westchester Stakes winner at Hollywood Park, and Hoist The Silver, the San Mateo Stakes hero at Bay Meadows.

The Golden Bear, originally carded for five furlongs on the turf, will be run at 5½ furlongs on the dirt because of the steady rains that saturated the area before letting up last weekend.

As a result, the turf course will still need a few more days to dry out, while the main track should be in pretty good shape although it was still listed as "slow" for Wednesday's workouts.

Catching an off track will be of little consequence to Natural Joe, who has produced several good workouts on off tracks in preparation for today's event.

"If dead tight enough, I think he'd win," said Joe's trainer Bobby Martin, who has won three straight Golden Gate training titles. "He's been training real well, but maybe some of the horses coming up from Santa Anita might have a little conditioning edge."

But Martin and Sanders have pointed Joe for this race, although longer races are definitely on their speedster's agenda.

"We'll go one race at a time with him and look at him after each race," says Sanders. "He went a mile easily and won at Sacramento. At Bay Meadows, he had a temperature and we were going to scratch him, but it dropped and we ran him."

After taking an early lead, Natural Joe faded and finished sixth.

"We just take one race at a time and see how he runs," confirmed Martin. "But of course, we're looking at two turns. There are lots of opportunities to run, but two turns, that's where it's all at.

"The California Derby? Sure, we'll keep it in mind if he progresses."

"He's grown," says Sanders of the pride and joy of his stable. "He's not a midget anymore. He's got a good stride when he gets into it. And he's proven he can carry weight."

The winner of the Santa Rosa Stakes, the Mid-Peninsula Stakes at the Bay Meadows Fair and the NCTA Sales Stakes and State Juvenile Championship at Sacramento, Natural Joe was listed on the experimental free weight handicap for two-year-olds at 110 pounds behind two-year-old champion and Cal Derby nominee Affirmed's 126.

While Natural Joe and Winners Preferred, another Golden Bear entrant, are Martin's top horses, the champion trainer relies upon a strong contingent of claimers to provide him with winners.

"We have 34 horses in our stable. I try to keep a lot of horses and keep them in condition to run," says Martin, explaining his secret of success.

Challenging Martin for the training title at the meeting will be the likes of Art Hirsch, the leading percentage trainer at Bay Meadows, Damon and Thomas Pollard, a formidable father-son duo, C.H. Comiskey, Kathy Walsh and Hall of Fame jockey John Longden.

The meeting runs for 98-days with a record 33 stakes worth $1.3 million.

The stakes schedule includes the Sorority and Camilla Ursa Friday and Saturday to wind up the first week's racing schedule.

Racing will continue through June 10 on a Tuesday through Saturday basis with post time each day at 12:30 p.m.

EBAL soccer

Dublin's gate is closed

Kevin Dick heads away yet another threat at Gael goal

That's the way it's been this season for the Gael's opponents as Dublin has allowed just one goal while scoring 35 of its own in East Bay Athletic League action.

Well the Livermore Cowboys were the Gaels' opponents yesterday and they found it just as tough to score on Dublin as other teams have.

The Gaels scored single goals in each half to post a 2-0 win and take a point lead over Granada in the EBAL title race.

In the first period Dublin kept the ball in Livermore's territory most of the time but a stubborn 'Poke defense held the Gaels in check.

However, with four minutes left in the half Finley Boag took a cross-pass from John Downing and fired it in from 10 yards out to give the Gaels a 1-0 advantage.

Downing did a brillant job of dribbling the ball down khe sidelines from the midfield stripe and evaded a Livermore defender before passing the ball to Boag.

Dublin almost scored again early in the second half when Jorge Garrett booted a line-drive shot which skidded over the bar.

But the Gaels got the goal back with 16 minutes gone when Dave Alvarez kicked the ball off a Livermore fullback and it went past the outstretched hands of Livermore goalie Ricky Woods.

Paul Mangini fired in a 10-yard shot with five minutes left but Dublin was called for offsides and the goal was disallowed.

The Gaels, now in EBAL play, fired 14 shots on goal to seven for the losers. The Cowboys had three corner kicks to none for the victors.

Gael coach Gene Cassvan was pleased with the win, particularly because it came against a rugged opponent.

"It was probably our best game of the season," he commented. "They (Livermore) gave us a good battle and it made us work harder. We needed this kind of win."

In the junior varsity match the 'Pokes and Gaels fought to a 1-1 tie.

Dublin tuned up for yesterday's victory by trouncing winless San Ramon 9-0 Tuesday.

EBAL girls hoop

Unbeatens meet

The buck stops here, tonight, for one of a pair of undefeated East Bay Athletic League girls basketball teams.

Amador Valley and Dublin, both unscathed in five league contests, meet for undisputed possession of first place in a 7:30 p.m. game in Dublin.

For the 1977 North Coast Section runners-up, the front line of Sheryl Withoft, Jayne Kuhns and Marian Hagler have been pouring in the points and rebounding well. The Dons are coming off wins over Livermore and Granada last week.

Withoft scored 17 points in a 57-44 win over Livermore, while Kuhns and Hagler each netted 10. The Dons talso pulled out an 11-point win over winless Granada in a surprisingly tough outing.

The Gaels, who have just as much momentum coming into the important contest, are led by center Joanne Callender and Marge Downing, who combined for 42 points in a 60-49 dumping of Monte Vista last week. Downing scored 23, while Callender had 19.

Other games on the schedule tonight have Granada (0-5) hosting California (2-3), San Ramon (2-3) visiting Livermore (2-3) and Foothill (2-3) playing host to Monte Vista (2-3).

Amador guards unbeaten string

Undefeated Amador Valley hopes to be able to play up to the level it did last week when it defeated Livermore when the Dons host Dublin tonight in an East Bay Athletic League wrestling match.

Amador Valley 4-0, is meeting a competitive Dublin club (2-2) that could give the Dons some problems if they are not at the top of their game.

In other EBAL matches tonight Foothill is at Monte Vista, California travels to Granada and San Ramon hosts Livermore.

Granada and Livermore are both 3-1 and need wins to keep their slim title hopes alive.

Amador Valley played prehaps its finest match of the season in dowing the Cowboys, 30-18 last week.

The Dons have beaten both Granada and Livermore and would seem to have the crown locked up. However, Dublin is strong in the heavy weights and could give AV a run for its money.

Steve Potts (at 114 pounds) had an excellent week for the Dons, despite being bothered by illness and a broken nose. He took two dual-meet wins and won the Mission San Jose Tournament Saturday, defeating the top-seeded wrester in the process.

Peterson keeps striking

Brian Peterson, bowling in the Guys and Dolls League, fired a 276 game with 10 straight strikes to highlight last week's action at the Granada Bowl.

Peterson had a 650 series. Pat Escoto of the Sunrisers League had her career high of 255. She has a 150 average.

Jim Schmitz, a 166 bowler in the Valley Handicap, bowled a 226 game en route to a 602 series. Bob Fanucchi also did well with a 694 series in the Men's Classic League. His brother Dennis followed with a 669 series and 259 high game.

Joe Ferrau tallied a 256 game and four-game total of 842 in the Mixed Classic League.

Elaine Loche of the Intel League bowled a 540 set with 189, 180 and 170 games.

Monte Carlo Cash Bowling continues every Saturday evening at 6:30 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Adult spring leagues are being formed and will begin in a couple of weeks. Interested persons may signup by dropping by Granada Bowl or calling 447-5600.

Chabot ends season

HAYWARD — Second-ranked Chabot takes on Diablo Valley College tonight in the Golden Gate Conference wrestling dual meet finale for both teams tonight at 7:30 here.

The Glads, undefeated in the Golden Gate Conference and trailing only Palomar in the state coaches poll, should on paper have an easy time of it against the Vikings, whose program has come on hard times of late.

Two Glads, Bruce Choate at 177, and Tom Thomsen at heavyweight are ranked best in the state in that same coaches poll. Tonight's match will serve as a tune-up for the post-season competition that will give both a chance to prove their deserve their lofty positions.

Hornets finish second

LAS VEGAS — The Livermore Green Hornets Under-eight city champions finished second in the Las Vegas Silver State Invitational Soccer Tournament here last weekend.

Livermore was second out of 14 teams, losing to San Jose 4-3 in the finals.

The Green Hornets advanced to the finals by beating Huntington Beach, 4-0. Tom Pappas scored four goals in that contest.

In the semi-final match the Green Hornets toppled Fresno city champions Easton Shrikes 4-1. Livermore trailed 1-0 but rallied for the victory.

Members of the team included Scott Clontz, Chris Carvacho, Kim Edgar, Beau Grant, Marc Grant, Mickey Hill, Pappas, Ken Tierney, Ned Tootle, Hylas Wilbanks, Corey Tripp, Jeff Saaverda, and Joey Miltner.

5	She Tiger (Frazier)	109	5
1	Saras Bird Song (Colaneri)	x109	6
6	Sunny Glen (Ochoa)	114	8
4	Petite Delight (Goldsmith)	114	10

CABINESS ran evenly against better down south. HARD HEARTED HANNA beat colts in last. QUATA SA BELLA figures close and had good blowout.

Longshot — PETITE DELIGHT.

6004 — FOURTH RACE. 5½ Furlongs. Maiden 3 Y.O. Fillies. Purse $6000.

5	Best Of Three (Diaz)	117	2

The annual report on California restaurants

SAN FRANCISCO — The annual report on "California Restaurant Operations," by accountants Laventhol & Horwath predicts five significant changes that should affect the dining business this year.

Their report covers both coffee shops and full-service dinner houses listed according to total sales and location.

Coffee shops were broken up into groups having sales under $400,000; those with sales between $400,000 and $599,999; and those with $600,000 and over. Various location categories include (1) Center city (2) Suburban and (3) Neighborhood — those situated in areas that are primariiy residential but which are near commercial concentrations providing an additional source of business.

According to Laventhol & Horwath, "changing social patterns and West Coast lifestyles are affecting California Restaurants. As more women are working outside the home and as families have fewer children, less time is devoted to meal preparation.

Steve Zimmerman, Executive Vice President of Zim's Restaurants said that there is a direct correlation between the increased percentage of women in the labor force and the increased revenue in the restaurant industry.

★ "Chefs" will begin to return to dinner house kitchens in sufficient numbers to displace the "broilerman" as the key kitchen employee. The term "chef" is used to identify employees with technical and/or professional training in the culinary arts.

The return to the use of chefs is due, in part, to the high degree of competition in California. Since very few culinary education programs exist on the West Coast, California restaurateurs will begin actively recruiting their chefs from the growing numbers of programs in the Midwest and East. As a result, some chains may opt for out-of-state expansion, thereby retaining the simplicity in preparation and presentation that has been their trademark.

★ "Mega-Restaurant" will become a commonplace California restaurant industry term as the number of restaurants over 10,000 square feet (not including banquet space) increases dramatically. Most of these restaurants will combine several food and beverage concepts under one roof, thus taking advantage of the economies inherent in shared management and shared preparation facilities.

Among operators who will be attracted to the "Mega-Restaurant" are those who now say, "If I don't have the capacity to approach three million dollars in sales. I am not sure it is worth it."

★ Terms such as "fast food," coffee shop, and dinner house will gradually lose meaning as definitive descriptions. Presently, at least two California-based chains have integrated a menu containing coffee shop items into a dinner house environment, thereby successfully tapping both markets. Similarly, a number of fast food chains now feature a product line competitive with coffee shops. The next step is the inclusion of modified table service.

★ Service will be another target of competitive investment.

Charley O's in Carmel

It rates better than par

I suppose you thought that "Charley O." was only associated with the sport of baseball or as the monicker for a truculent donkey who cavorted at Oakland A's baseball games?

Not so.

"Charley O" is the name of a restaurant in Carmel, located on one of the seaside community's fabled side street "hideaways."

The side street in this instance is the English Village ambience of Dolores Street. The narrow but quaint motorway is also home for two other eateries of note, La Boheme and The Studio, the latter being a dinner theater.

It was our good fortune to happen by "Charley O's" (the "O" stands for Ober) last Sunday after the third round of the Crosby Pro-Am.

Though the restaurant has long since been "discovered" by Herb Caen and Clint Eastwood, the vast majority of patrons last Sunday appeared to be common gentry— mixed in with a socialite here and a stray golfer there.

Though Charley O's features a great variety, they seem to take special pains with the fish dishes, topped by a $9.25 item (which we passed up for the beef tournedos) labeled "giant Thai shrimp."

On the next trip we'll try the shrimp.

The entree, plus the vegetables, salad and dessert, were extraordinary. The "other" Charley O. should eat as well.

La Boheme, just down Dolores and on the other side, offers one entree each night for the same price, $6.50. No reservations are taken and, in true family style, they bring the food to your table in pots and pans, which are placed on the table while you ladle out the portions.

The night we discovered La Boheme they were serving Moussika of Lamb Nikonos and a hearty vegetable dish.

Cal State's hot spot for lunch

HAYWARD — No longer do Cal State Hayward students have to weigh each ounce of a skimpy sandwich as is the custom at their dining facilities.

Instead they can trot down the Harder Street hill and grab a belly full of a submarine sandwich at Iven's sub shop. It is THE place for the Cal State for lunch bunch. And what's more, Iven doesn't even own any scales to measure out each portion of meat. Take it from a guy who's been there, Ol' Iven really knows how to heap it on.

He's got everything from hot pastrami and cheese to avocado and turkey. A medium size barbeque beef will cost over $2 but it's bigger than most large sandwiches you'll find anywhere. Iven serves all sandwiches in a pocket-style french roll so you won't lose any tasty ingredients. Check out Iven's just below Cal State at the intersection of Mission and Harder .

Don't joke when someone chokes

Four minutes without oxygen is enough to cause permanent brain damage and can result from a piece of food stuck in a person's windpipe if fast action is not taken.

Diners in restaurants often mistake the cause of a victim's collapse as a stroke or heart attack and that has led fatally accidental chokings to be called "safe coronaries."

Stroke and heart attack victims, if conscious, can usually breath and talk but a choking victim can do neither.

To save a choking person, treatment must be immediate but such deaths are definitely preventable. First, ask the victim to talk. If talking and coughing are possible do not interfere but victims unable to make a sound are in serious trouble.

Second, strike the victim several times in quick succession between the shoulder blades with the heel of the hand.

If the throat remains blocked, wrap arms around the victim's waist, place one fist against the abdomen between the navel and rib cage then press in with a quick, upward thrust and repeat several times if necessary.

If the victim is unconscious and the cause is unknown, first attempt mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and if the chest does not rise treat for choking by rolling the victim on the side and striking sharply between the shoulder blades then remove foreign matter and try resuscitation again.

If that fails stand by the person's hips and place the heel of the hand on the abdomen just below the navel and press toward the center with a quick motion but do not press to either side.

A course on fine cuisine

Like the idea of preparing and sampling delicious food under the direction of a master chef? Then you should plan to attend a four-session course in European cuisine starting this week.

Classes run through the Amador Valley Adult Education, will be held Thursdays beginning Jan. 26 at Foothill High School. Fee is $10 for the complete series.

Siegward Osicki is the chef who will demonstrate the art of European cuisine, including traditional French cooking and the "new style" French cuisine with less calories but "magnificent taste," according to the chef.

Osicki is a resident of Danville.

Leadership, name for social service union

Inter-Act!

The Valley's coalition of social service agencies has adopted that name, standing for inter-agency coordinating task force, as it formally moves into operation after a series of organizational meetings.

Milt Woolley of Horizons will serve as interim chairperson through June with Betty Stallings, executive director of the Valley Volunteer Bureau, as vice chairperson, Bea Langlois of Good Samaritan as secretary, and Marian Mendelson of Family Services as treasurer.

Valley Child Care, located at 1520 Catalina Ct. in Livermore, will provide office space for the coalition, which seeks to present a unified voice to municipal, county and state government in the realms of financial aid and assistance to the Valley community.

The Inter-Act number at Valley Child Care will be 455-5111.

Wednesday's meeting at the Presbyterian Church in Pleasanton set the foundation for naming the coalition, appointing officers, agreeing on methods of procedure and hearing a report on the status of revenue sharing from Tom McCormick of Alameda County's Office of Revenue Sharing.

Several sub-committees were also formed with Sharon Kosch of the City of Pleasanton and Barbara Tuck of Parental Stress heading a review panel on voting, dues and fees.

Among the initial objectives of Inter-Act is to 1) Provide on-going identification of community needs, 2) Work-up a services directory for the community, 3) Establish an internal newsletter as a link between Valley agencies (of which more than 80 have been identified to date), and 4) Setup workshops, possibly in league with Chabot College and the adult education branches of the local school districts.

Inter-Act has set the last Wednesday of each month as their regular meeting date.

At the Wednesday, Feb. 22 night meeting, Inter-Act will host council candidates from Livermore and Pleasanton with the meeting open to the public.
